

Harold found a low place in the mountains. It was a good place for a railroad to go through. It came out onto a long flat field. Harold put some birds and flowers near the tracks. "People like to see things from trains." he said. He went on, drawing tracks and birds and flowers. And he had to keep looking out for trains.

